FRANK J. TERRELL BURIED BENEATH WRECKAGE OF AEROPLANE

ENGINE TROUBLE WAS THE CAUSE

In Attempting to Avoid Striking Spectators Lost Control of Machine.

(By Associated Press.)

CHESTERFIELD, S. C., Nov. 16.—Frank J. Terrell, an aviator, was instantly killed at a county fair here today when engine trouble forced him to make a quick descent and he attempted to avoid striking spectators who had surged past the police and filled the landing ground. Terrell's home was at Worcester, Mass. The aviator had ascended to a height of 500 feet without mishap when his engine began to give him trouble. He stopped it and started to glide the aeroplane to earth. When near the ground he saw the crowd covering the usual landing ground and gave the machine a quick turn by shifting his weight. It crashed to the ground a few feet from the crowd, with Terrell buried beneath the wreckage.

CHEDDAR NEWS.

While playing in the blacksmith shop at Cheddar, Lowell, the little four year old son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Kelly, came very near having a serious accident when a small piece of iron struck his eye, almost destroying eyesight. He was carried to Anderson where he received medical attention, and is now doing nicely.

Mrs. J. B. Ellison and Mrs. Thomas McGregory have been on the sick list for the last week.

Miss Mary Copeland left Monday for Belton where she has accepted a position at Hodges store.

Miss Lucy Kelly spent Tuesday night in Belton with her mother.

Bobbie, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Mahaffey was quite ill for a few days last week.

Mrs. Rose Garrison visited relatives in Piedmont last week.

For several weeks we have been reading of the movement in Anderson to wipe out the evil of the liquor trade, and we have also followed closely the articles in the Intelligencer in which our editor so fearlessly and courageously made the stand for right, regardless of what the consequences might be, or how far public opinion would uphold him. No one can help admiring such a spirit and the people of Anderson county should be proud of the fact that at the head of her leading newspaper stands a man of this type. Anderson has never been the place for the practice of those things which help to tear down a city, and when her citizens are fully aroused to the need of this campaign much good will be accomplished. The organization which has already been fully discussed will be a means to this end. It may not save every evil deed, but it might save one boy, and if it does the effort will be fully repaid. On last Sunday every Baptist Sunday school in all our bright

Southland studied the "Temperance lesson," and how forcibly it brought to mind the truth that every man is his brother's keeper. In the busy cares of every day life and in the mad rush for material things, the duty of man to man seems to be forgotten, and we pass by the brother who is a slave to the demon of drink without even a backward glance. We never think of it as a duty to stretch out our arm into the tossing, surging sea of intemperance and lift up those who are being carried away daily. Men do not always willingly go in the wrong direction, but begin by gradually straying from the path of right. It is at this point that a kindly smile, a helpful word will do so much to restore courage to those in danger of losing their manhood. So few of us realize the weight of personal influence. It touches one life and that another, and still another and so on, on, on, until like the mighty waves of the sea, it gathers volume and becomes greater as it goes. Each life has an influence either for good or evil—and it is continually being exerted one way or the other. Half the young men of today would not sink into the depths of sin if it were not for somebody's influence. Some are strong enough to withstand, but it takes courage. Not all the heroes are on the battlefield. The bravest men are not always under marching orders. Who knows how many battles have been fought against the ranks of sin, even in the city of Anderson? Who knows how many bright boys have wrestled with the influence of an evil companion against the influence of a pure, good mother. It requires true bravery to win in a fight of this kind, but "He that ruleth himself is greater than he that taketh a city."

How splendid it would be if every boy and every girl as well, could look up, in spite of all evil influences and adverse circumstances, towards that which is true and right—not because somebody tried to help them—but because they should be true to themselves and their honor. Reading in a recent issue of the Intelligencer the letter of Mr. G. Cullen Sullivan, which was so full of human sympathy, recalled a time not long ago when this same man addressed a small group of boys and girls. It was not a temperance lecture, but it reached the heart of every listener. It was an appeal to a life of truth and worth; an appeal that they should make for themselves a place of trust and honor among their friends; that they should strive not for fame, but towards the goal of a well spent life.

Would that all of our leading men and citizens would pause long enough to think what it will mean to keep the youth of the nation clean and unspotted.

LITTLE GIRL DEAD.

Ellen Garren Graham Died Saturday At 12 O'clock.

Anderson people learned yesterday with a great deal of regret of the death of little Ellen Garren Graham, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis A. Graham, which occurred yesterday about noon at the home of the parents on Glenn street. The little girl had been ill for the past fortnight with pneumonia and erysipelas and for the last few days her condition had been critical.

The funeral services will take place this afternoon at the home at 3 o'clock, followed by interment in Silver Brook cemetery.

Songs Are Insults to Negro Race

(By Associated Press.) BOSTON, Nov. 12.—The old plantation songs, "My Old Kentucky Home," "Oh, Susannah," "Massa in de Cold, Cold Ground," are insults to the negro race, according to speakers, who appeared today at a hearing before the Boston school committee. As a result of their protest the committee voted immediately to withdraw from the schools a book of forty songs recently compiled by the musical director.

The objections to the songs were based partly on the use of the words "darkey," "nigger" and "coon."

W. V. Alexander was among the visitors to spend yesterday in the city. T. E. Webb of Williamston came to Anderson yesterday on business.

FROM SEPTUS

With the exception of Mrs. T. J. Elliott, who has been quite sick for the past month, the health of the community is good and we have at least this much to be thankful.

With the harvest acreage of small grain already sown in this community and with a big corn crop to be planted in the spring, old King Cotton will get a shock in 1915 by the farmers of Septus that he will not soon forget. Very little cotton and guano, is the slogan of our people up here, Mr. Editor, and it's not going to take any man-made law to force us to it either.

Mr. Jack Elgin and sister, Miss Avis of Anderson made a flying trip to Septus last Tuesday.

Mrs. Pat Francke of Ninety-Six is spending a few days with her brother, Dr. W. S. Hutchinson and family.

We were indeed sorry to hear of the death of our friend Mr. R. A. Mullikin of Beaverdam. "Lon" Mullikin, as he was known to his friends, was a model husband and father. He was a good friend, a fine neighbor and a high-toned Christian citizen and with this what greater heritage could he have left his loved ones.

We very deeply sympathize with the bereaved wife and children in their sad affliction.

Prof. Jeyro—Yes, boys, the pen is mightier than the sword.

Ralph McAllister—Then Professor, could a boy be prosecuted for carrying weapons when caught with a fountain pen in his pocket?

Miss Annie Mullikin of Abbeville visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Mullikin here last Saturday and Sunday.

One way of saving money is to only lend that fellow five dollars when he strikes you for a ten spot.

Mr. and Mrs. Joyce Elliott and Little son of Birmingham, Ala., are here to spend several weeks with Mr. Elliott's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Elliott.

And now it is said that a Pendleton lady has changed the color of her hair from brown to red in order to gratify her husband's request.

Piercetown Father—And now, my son, if you live beyond your income you are sure to come to grief.

Son—And if I have to live within my income, dad, I am going to persist in doing so.

Suite an army of good porkers will soon meet their Waterloo at the hands of the Septus farmers.

Already our friend Allen McAllister has sent the writer a nice dish of fresh sausage, ground and seasoned to the queen's taste. Who'll be the next?

The Lord loves a cheerful giver, and so does

"Casey."

ter for the occasion. The invocation was delivered by Rev. S. W. Danner, pastor of Bethel church, and he was followed by F. M. Burnett, secretary of the Anderson Y. M. C. A., who spoke at length on what the mill extension work is accomplishing. The mill men gave Mr. Burnett a hearty reception.

Rev. S. W. Danner was next introduced and talked at length of the work he is doing among the mill people and of the results being secured. His stay of one year in Anderson has been more than pleasant, said Mr. Danner.

W. F. Wright said that he had been looking forward to this affair ever since the last one took place but that he had not hoped for such a delightful evening as this one proved to be.

Mayor Godfrey was next introduced and he told his hearers that he proposed to see to it that the cotton mill men get a square deal. He said that the city was ready and willing, he believed, to work the streets in the cotton mill villages, provided the mill companies would feed the streets to the city. The mayor told his hearers that he and three of the councilmen, Messrs. Spearman, Tate and Carter, were with him and that they would see to it that the cotton mill men got a square deal and got all that was coming to them. He thinks that with this number of councilmen willing to aid that the street work in the mill villages can easily be disposed of and that they can accomplish what was promised during the campaign.

F. J. Clark, one of the most popular of all the Anderson cotton mill workers, was received with delight and made a splendid address. He told what he hoped to accomplish in the way of aiding his workers and says that his helpers are the finest people in the world.

C. O. Carter made a hit with the crowd and delighted them for several minutes with his witty remarks.

W. C. Austin spoke for some time on the relations of the church and the cotton mill man and told them that they should continue the interest in the church work among them.

The last speaker was General M. L. Bonham and he made a heart to heart talk. Gen. Bonham is a great favorite with the men of the cotton mills and he told the cotton mill men of his willingness to aid them at any time in their fights and assured them of his desire to help them at any time.

Will Be Well Protected in Foreign War Since American Shoes Have Been Ordered.

The average reader of The Intelligencer will have some little difficulty in picturing in his or her mind just how many shoes can be bought for the sum of $1,500,000. That is the order recently received by the Endicott-Johnson Shoe company, within the last few weeks, according to J. W. Locke, who spent yesterday in the city. Mr. Locke is salesman for this company and calls on the shoe firm of Geisberg Shoe company. While here he told of his firm having received this enormous order from the Allies for shoes to fit out their army and said that his plant was being taxed to take care of the order. He says that his company has already shipped 18 car loads of shoes to the Allies and that the manufacturing plant is running overtime to take care of the additional shipments.

Fame

Of Good Work Being Done by the Farmers Exchange Has Spread.

The work being done by the Anderson Chamber of Commerce and more especially by the Farmers Exchange feature of the local trades body has spread abroad, judging from a letter received here yesterday. The letter was written to Porter A. Whaley, secretary of the Anderson Chamber of Commerce, and came from T. C. Carrington, secretary of the Electric Commercial club of Elberton, Texas. In his letter Mr. Carrington says that his organization has heard of the splendid results being secured here through the farmers exchange and he desires to inaugurate the system in his city.

HENS IN COLD WEATHER.

Care Should Be Exercised Not to Overcrowd Sleeping Quarters.

There is no doubt whatever that a warm roosting compartment is a tremendous aid toward maintaining poultry, both adult and young stock, in good health and, incidentally, toward encouraging a plentiful supply of eggs during the winter months. Many poultry raisers make the serious mistake, however, of overcrowding their houses very considerably, although they may have gone to the trouble of providing excellent accommodations, writes M. K. Boyer in the American Cultivator.

To do so under such conditions is merely a waste of labor and money, and the full benefit will not be felt. It is sometimes imagined that during cold weather it is a good plan to overcrowd the sleeping quarters in order to keep the birds warm, but this is quite an erroneous idea. If the house is substantially built of good material the birds will be quite warm enough without overcrowding the place and so making the air impure and vitiated. Roughly speaking, two square feet of floor space should be allowed per bird, that is to say that in a house measuring 5 by 5 feet fifteen birds can be accommodated in comfort.

Ducks Need Bathing Pond.

While ducks can be successfully kept on land that has no water except for drinking purposes, yet it has been proved that those having the advantage of bathing water keep in a more healthful condition and there is greater fertility in their eggs. Bathing is, of course, a natural instinct of a duck, for, unlike a hen, a duck cannot scratch. A less number of drakes is necessary where bathing water is supplied. The age and productiveness in a duck are about double those of the hen. Ducks have been profitably bred up until seven years of age.—Kansas Farmer.

Will Ask For One Million More Troops

LONDON, Nov. 13.—(1:55 a. m.)—It is reported that Premier Asquith will on Tuesday ask parliament's sanction for the raising of one million additional troops bringing the total up to 2,000,000 men.

It is understood that the government intends to issue a loan of $1,000,000,000 or more, probably at 4 per cent, and redeemable within ten years. It is estimated that Great Britain is spending $55,000,000 weekly on the war and in addition to the war loan the government may propose to raise a further $250,000,000 by increasing the income tax to half a crown.

Now is the time for all fair women to come to the aid of the cotton trade.

Europe evidently believes with one Benjamin Franklin that "disputes are apt to sour one's temper and disturb one's quiet," so rather than suffer her feelings to be ruffled she will simply fight it all out.
